

Welcome to A Level English Language & Literature.

Please complete the following tasks ready for your first day at New College:

After reading the play produce an essay of at least 600 wor

There will be no time for sorrow.

The enemy

is coming, and he will bring a rightful destruction.

There are many regional commanders, each with his own troops and

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

It is not a question of if, it's a question of when.

We know he has already devolved the decision to lower commanders, and...

that means he has already made the decision himself.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Each will

fight for

his own

regiment.

Verisimilitude
Expressionism
Realism
Nomenclature
Anamnesis
Anachronism
Monologue
Aside
Dramatic Irony
Phallogocentrism
Patriarchy
Fraternity		